

An Appeal For Philosophical Sanity.

People and nations on our planet Earth are going through serious and critical stages of development. The present vision of the historical and political progress is that of two opposing camps competing to retain and exploit their political, military and economic domination of the world. It is interesting that two of the major world economic powers are governed by women with the super US power becoming the third in line if Hillary Clinton succeeds in the coming presidential election. Furthermore, the waging of civil wars and emergence of fundamental terrorism sponsored by authoritarian regimes with the allied cooperation and backing of super powers is presenting serious problems leading to a miserable humanitarian crises of unpredictable dimension. There seems to be no solution but the further prospect of more destruction of nations and displacement of innocent people. Fellow scientists should divert their attention to this serious development of history otherwise the next generations of life on this planet are going to face deathly crises.
